Program: 'Community Outreach and Resource Education'(CORE), a program of the Madison Police Department was described by Officer Lu Senatus. Officer Senatus spent his early years in Florida and because of his involvement in PAL (Police Athletic League) which was a program for youth. He spent some early years as a police officer in Florida before moving to Madison. He has been a Madison Police Officer for five and a half years.

The CORE mission is to enhance the Madison Police Department's efforts to reduce disproportionate arrests related to racial disparities and improve trust and perception of fairness through procedural justice, community outreach, education and problem solving.

CORE Objectives

- Break down barriers between youth and police.
- Create and expand programs to divert youth from the criminal justice system
- Work collaboratively across districts and with outside agencies to find solutions to social and community issues.

Officer Lu described numerous flagship programs of CORE:

1. Mentorship
2. Youth Academies
